

What is a Bed & Breakfast?

Many innkeepers have expressed that the true meaning of a bed and breakfast has been lost with the presence of vacation home rental conglomerates. Unfortunately, business has been affected by travelers opting for accommodations with corporations that offer such lodging. Some are left fighting to keep their business afloat.

We have been reminded that they are just that, a business. They are insured, have gone through all the regulations, passed required inspections; not to mention, innkeepers are on site to help you check in and take care of any of your personalized needs. They encourage you to book direct with them, so they can not only prepare first-hand for any special requirements guests may have, but to offer a special touch of good ole-fashioned customer service that has been lost with booking sites or the click of a button. They also offer just what they say in their name, a delicious breakfast included with your stay.

Whether it be a farm fresh breakfast with homemade bread (the way your grandmother would make), or prepared by a cutting-edge professional chef who is up with current foodie trends, we believe that the breakfast is by far one of the best things about staying at a B&B.

We are not sure why anyone would want to stay anywhere else! We want to remind travelers just how much of a personal touch is put into your stay.

Remember, they are a small business, please help support them by considering to book your next trip with a bed and breakfast. Give them a call, book direct, and don't pass on a freshly baked cookie. Go ahead, have two when you check in, and after a relaxing night, start your day the right way— eat breakfast like a champion!
